Senator Platt Looking After New Candidates Who Are Already in Some Statements That Will Not York Appointments.

Outside of the currency question, the President's cabinet discussed nothing of genral interest today. The question of a Saturday half holiday was not brought up. It will go over until Friday. At the conclusion of today's meeting Attorney General McKenna remained some time with the President, talking over pardon cases.

Representative McMillin of Tennessee interceded with the President today for Commander Mullan. He asked the President not to sanction the sentence, which he characterized as unjust and illegal. The President is receiving many appeals from the friends of the commander. He will not take the case up for several days.

It is expected that the President will shortly nominate a register of the treasury to succeed J. Fount Tillman. Leading colored men say they have reason to believe from talks with the President, that he will appoint a colored man to the plum. It was said today that the three leading colored candidates are ex-Senator B. K. Bruce, Prof. R. R. Wright of Georgia and Gaines, the Kentucky man, who is being so strongly pushed. Ex-State Senator Green of Ohlo is also said to be a probability. ly pushed. Ex-State Senator Green of Onio is also said to be a probability.

Prior to the cabinet meeting the President saw a part of the large number of callers, but it was a small part. Senator Allison saw the President early and talked over the tariff situation with him. The President looks forward to the speedy passage of the tariff bill. It is probable that President will be at the Capitol when the tariff bill is passed and will sign the bill on the spot. So soon as this is done the President will speedily finish the con-sular and other appointments which he has been holding up, and will then get away for his summer vacation. He will hardly for his summer vacation. He will hardly get things in shape for leaving before the 1st of August. He has not determined where he will go, and will not reach a conclusion at once. Mrs. John A. Logan called on him today and he practically promised to go to Chicago to attend the unveiling of the preparate to Goa Lohn A. Logan of the monument to Gen. John A. Logan July 23. This will necessitate the Presi-dent's departure about the 21st. The only thing which could prevent this would be the adjournment of Congress about that

The President has promised to take two months on his vacation. During that time, however, he will fill several engagements. One of these will be to attend the G. A. R. encampment at Buffalo. Another is to attend a reunion of his regiment in Ohio.

The New York Offices. Senator Platt had a conference with the President about New York offices and the consular places which are to go to that state. The slate for New York and Brooklyn, as agreed upon by the Platt and anti-Platt factions, is said to be as follows:

Robert J. Sharkey (Platt) for naval offi-cer of the port of New York. Silas C. Croft (Platt) for surveyor of the port of New York. Andrew Jackson (anti-Platt) has been offered, but has not accepted, the Brook-lyn postmastership. Walter B. Atterbury (anti-Platt) has been offered the post of superintendent of immigration at Ellis Island, but it is said that he has declined.

Gen. H. L. Burnett (Platt) for district at-torney for the southern district of New York. Anti-Platt people are still fighting Gen. Burnett. Ex-Gov. John S. Wise, who was the anti-Platt candidate for this place, was at the White House today, but it is not thought that there will be any change in the slate. Senator Platt personally wants Gen. PROPOSED CHICAGO TRIP PECULIAR CONDITIONS THE RECORD OF HISTORY

The approaching adjournment of Congress and the resulting departure of the majority of the senators and representatives from the city has inspired among the applicants for local offices and their friends an intention to storm the White House and endeavor to get President McKinley to distribute the federal patronage in the District of Columbia as soon as the outsiders leave. It was semi-officially announced at the commencement of the present administration that the office holders appointed by President Cleveland, both in Washington and elsewhere, would be permitted to serve out their full terms of office. The resignation of Recorder Taylor paved the way for the appointment of Re-corder Cheatham, and since then nothing has been done at the White House concerning the local offices. It is claimed in some quarters, however, and whispered mysteriously about that President McKinsome quarters, however, and whispered mysteriously about that President McKinley is about to change his mind on the subject of letting incumbents finish out their terms, and, in view of these rumors, there has been a marshaling of forces on the part of the republicans who want to step into shoes that present wearers may be required to kick off. The rumor about President McKinley's intention in this direction takes the shape that he will suggest the resignations of incumbents, as he did in the Taylor case. While President McKinley himself has not indicated any disposition to do anything of the sort, such gossip has nevertheless had the effect of awaking the sleeping hopes of those who hear it, and there is animation among them accordingly.

One official's term will expire in January, 1898. It is that of Judge Kimball of the Police Court. There is a very strong movement on foot to have Judge Kimball reappointed, but there are other gentlemen being influentially backed for the place. Justice Samuel C. Mills is one of these, and Justice Scott, who has presided also over the two politics courts in the absence of tice Samuel C. Mills is one of these, and Justice Scott, who has presided also over the two police courts in the absence of either Judge Miller or Judge Kimball, is another. The friends of John H. O'Donnell of East Washington claim that he has the best chance for the appointment, because the two Pennsylvania senators are at work in his interests. E. M. Hewlett, the colored lawyer, is said to be a well-backed candidate. The friends of Mr. James L. Pugh, at present the prosecuting attorney in Judge Kimball's court, are very anxious for him to mount the bench. Of course, for him to mount the bench. Of course, Mr. Pugh is not a candidate, as his position would prevent such a thing, but it is believed he would accept the place if it was tendered him.

Marshal A. A. Wilson's term also expires next January. The announcement was made when President McKinley was inaugurated that he had offered the marshalphing to Willim Hahn, the Ohio republican politician. There was much opposition expressed to the selection of an outsider, and a general expression in favor of the ana general expression in favor of the ap-pointment of National Committeeman Myron M. If Collector Dorsey Clagett's term is regarded as a continuation of that of his predecessor, Wm. H. Manogue, it will expire in May, 1898. If his appointment is looked upon as an original one, it will not terminate until October, 1898. William B. Todd is the first applicant to announce himself openly as a candidate to succeed to the collectorship, but there are said to be many in the thickets merely awaiting the proper moment to show themselves.

cember, 1838. Some time ago ex-Posimas-ter Sherwood was regarded as having the best chance to succeed him, but it has recently developed that he will not, in all probability, be chosen. It is currently re-ported that Mr. Archibald Greenlees of this city has aiready secured the support of many prominent citizens, regardless of party, in behalf of his candidacy for the place, and there is also gossip to the ef-fect that Major Hillman A. Hall also has his eye upon it. Register of Wills J. Nota McGill's term, if four years is regarded as a term in the cffice he holds, will expire in September, 1899. It is a very interesting question if there is such a thing as a limit to his term, however. The probate law in the District is governed absolutely by the Maryland law of 1798, and section 4 of chapter 60 of that law provides that regis-ters of wills shall hold their commissions during good behavior, removable only for misbehavior on conviction in a court of law. If this held good Mr. McGill would unquestionably grow gray in office if he so desired. Since President Garfield called for the resignation of Col. Amos Webster, how-ever, the rule has been to let each incumbent serve a term of five years and four days. If this is done in Mr. McGill's case he will serve at least until September 8, 1900. The leading candidates for this place are Col. Levi P. Wright and Mr. Milton M. Holland.

District Attorney Davis has never received a presidential appointment, and consequently it is a question whether his selection by the District Supreme Court to fill an existing vacancy can be regarded as being for a four years' term. It is declared with much positiveness in circles usually well informed that a change in the office has been practically determined upon, and that a republican will succeed Mr. Davis on October 1 next.

It was learned today that all the District judges and the bar association had indorsed Mr. Thomas M. Callan for appointment to one of the two vacancies existing among the District justices of the peace.

Rebuilding on Ellis Island.

Secretary Gage has written a letter to Senator Hale, in charge of the general deficiency appropriation bill, urging the incorporation in this bill of a provision for rebuilding the immigrant station at Ellis Island. The Secretary says that if ample provision is made for the building at once the construction can be completed by January 1, 1899. While in the opinion of the Secretary $600,000 will be necessary to complete the work, he says that only $200,000 need be made available at present. The Secretary says that as this is the largest immigrant depot in the world it should, when rebuilt, combine the best features of an institution of the kind.

Appeals to the President in Behalf of Gossip About the Places and the Liliuokalani, the Former Queen of Bear Scrutiny.

HONOLULU, June 23, 1897. A champion of Liliuokalani has recently come forward in Harper's Bazar in the person of Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford, a writer of high repute. Mrs. Spofford appears to have been so deeply impressed by the gracious bearing of her ex-majesty as to have unguardedly accepted as truth all representations of fact made by herself or her secretary, Julius A. Palmer. She has thus been misled into making a number of marvelous misstatements in her Bazar article, which have created much of both indignation and amusement in Honolulu, where the facts are well known and the Bazar is much in vogue among the ladies. It seems fitting to refute some of these misleading errors, although a somewhat ungracious task.

As Liliuokalani has assumed the position of attacking the present government of Hawaii, and opposing annexation in the name of the Hawaiian people, she must accept the natural penalties of her undertaking, in case of departure from the truth. Mrs. Spofford's highly enthusiastic description of the ex-queen's external graces of appearance and manner is not altogether inaccurate. Mrs. Dominis was adopted in infancy by members of the royal family and passed all her years in court circles. She has always teen accustomed to meet from time to time noble or princely visitors to Hawaii, persons often of exquisite grace of manner. She also visited Queen Victoria's court in the jubilee of 1887, where she was cordially entertained. Her opportunities for cultivating the external graces have been exceptional, and she has not failed to improve them.

Next comes this sentence: "There are few women on thrones today who are as entirely royal in descent as Illipateles." of attacking the present government of

Next comes this sentence: "There are few women on thrones today who are as entirely royal in descent as Liliuokalani; she has no other blood in her veins than the blood of kings." Again, "The queen, her niece, the lovely Kalulani, and two cousins are now the last of the Kamehamehas." The well-known facts are that none of the individuals named possesses any except some very distant and indistinct relationship to the Kamehameha family or to any other branch of former royal families in these islands. The exceptions are the two young gentlemen commonly known as Prince Jonah and Prince Cupid, who are remotely descended from King Kaumualii of Kauai, who died seventy years ago and was not related to the family of Kamehameha. These "princes" are nephews of Kalakaua's widow, and are not otherwise related to Liliuokalani. Kalakaua and the ex-queen were children of Keohokalole, a chlefess of the third grade, whose husband was Kapaakea, of similar rank. The mother. like all third grade, kaua and the ex-queen were children of Keohokalole, a chiefess of the third grade, whose hushand was Kapaakea, of similar rank. The mother, like all third-grade chiefs, could trace descent from royalty somewhere from six to ten generations back. King Kalakaua was, beyond possible contradiction, the natural son, not of Kapaakea, but of a Jamaica quadroon, John Blossom, who flourished in Honolulu nearly sixty years ago. Liliuokalani is also generally believed to be of the same origin, possessing therefore three-eighths white blood and one-eighth negro, which betrays itself in her wavy hair, which is not like the straight Polynesian locks. A legitimate son of John Blossom still survives in this city, who strikingly resembles both Kalakaua and Liliuokalani. So much for Mrs. Spofford's accuracy alout the royal descent.

The ex-queen may be distantly related, as Mrs. Spofford alleges, to the excellent, heroic and gentle lady, Kapiolani, whom Tennyson sang as the defier of the terrible fire goddess Pele. Mrs. Spofford says "Liliuokalani is a woman who today could do the same thing." Unfortunately, about twelve years ago she did precisely the opposite

Unfortunately, about twelve years ago she did precisely he opposite thing. After, as heir apparent, royally patronizing a great Sunday school convention of the natives at Hilo, she proceeded tion of the natives at Hilo, she proceeded with her retinue to the Volcano Hotel and descended to the great Fire Lake. Instead, descended to the great Fire Lake. Instead, however, of defiantly flinging in stones, like Kapiolani in 1825, she threw in a live pig and a live fowl as a sacrifice to the goddess, accompanying the act with heathen chants by her attendants. This I state upon the personal testimony of a guide, who carried the pig and witnessed the sacrifice as well as of the white keeper of the who carried the pig and witnessed the sacrifice, as well as of the white keeper of the hotel, who knew all about it. Mrs. Dominis afterward endeavored to parry the charge by explaining it as a "harmless conformity to ancient customs, like standing under the mistletoe." There have been, however, too many cases well known of her otherwise participating in gross heathen ceremonies when visiting country districts. She may not have been personally superstitions; she may have done these things solely for the political purpose of winning to herself, as she succeeded in doing the firm support of the large heather. winning to herself, as she succeeded in doing, the firm support of the large heathen party among the natives, who are now the strongest element among the royalists. It was this gross tampering with the ancient idolatry which set so many of the best and ablest native pastors against her when de

"Guileless and Kindly" Queen.

"Her majesty," Mrs. Spofford rambles on, "is of a simple and kindly and unsuspicious nature." But it seems to have been the gifted lady interviewer who was so simple and unsuspicious. The occupants of thrones are rarely guileless persons. In the arts of dissimulation they are generally past masters, and her ex-majesty is hardly an exception. So thought our ex-cellent ladies of the W. C. T. U., whose appeals against the proposed lottery and opium bills she used so tearfully to res-pond to, all the time that she was diligentby bribing the native legislators to vote for them, just before she was dethroned. If the royal lady has any one accomplish-ment more perfected than another it is that of facile dissimulation. Nothing is better understood by all experienced residents of Honolulu, native or foreign. dents of Honolulu, native or foreign.

Mrs. Spofford next boldly touches a delicate subject. "She has lived a spotless life as child, woman and wife," and so on, at considerable length. On the whole, it at considerable length. On the whole, it seems best to refrain from specifically discussing this subject. It is an unsavory one; it is one where it is difficult to distinguish between fact and scandal; it is one as to which women of Hawaiian birth are entitled to the most forbearing and tolerant judgment, in view of the utterly different ethical standard of the race as compared with that of Europe. It does not em ethical standard of the race as com-pared with that of Europe. It does not seem unjust, however, to refer to a viru-lent adverse statement of her then bitter enemy, Col. V. V. Ashford, which embodied the worst allegations then made against the queen. That statement is to be found in Blount's Report, on pages 208-210. Similar charges were made daily by John E. Bush and Robert Wilcox in the legislative debates of 1892, and in Bush's Hawaiian and English daily. Velce of the Newton debates of 1892, and in Bush's Hawaiian and English daily, Voice of the Nation. These three men, Ashford, Wilcox and Bush, were steady haters of the "reform" or "missionary" party, but just at that time were temporarily hostile to the queen and her alleged favorite, Marshal Wilson. They only gave open voice to what had long been current scandal, whether true or not.

The queen did not appear implacably to The queen did not appear implacably to resent these charges. Two years later, when preparing the insurrection of January, 1895, Mrs. Dominis not only accepted the services of Wilcox as a military leader, she also so far condoned the outrageous published vilifications of V. V. Ashford (which he had printed in the San Francisco Chronicle) that in reward of his promised military aid in the insurrection, she made out and executed a commission to Ashford as associate chief justice of the to Ashford as associate chief justice of the supreme court. Spofford undertake to deny that Mr. Willis stated any more or less than the precise truth as to Liliuokalani insisting that her political enemies should be "beheaded?" Her interviewer makes much of her boasted benevolence in maintaining "twenty girls at the Missionary Seminary, and as many more at various other schools." Twenty pupils at $50 each would cost $1,000. Liliuokalani did not do this personally, but through an association of women, to whose funds she contributed no doubt liberally. Meantime two aged ladies of the mission, whose husbands, being laymen and having engaged in business, had left them wealth, were giving to the same girls' schools several thousand dollars aplece every year. But Liliuokalani's great influence thus acquired over the girls was always felt by the trustees to be extremely pernicious, in casting over the school the poisonous shadow of the vilely corrupt court of Kalakaua. It was a happy day for Kawalahar Seminary when royal patronage and royal influence came to an end. abundant evidence before the military commission who subsequently tried both Liliuokalani and Ashford for "misprision of treason." If Ashford was such a liar, why did she appoint him to an office which of all others demanded unquestionable integrity? Somewhere a paralysis of moral sense is apparent.

Was She Falsely Quoted? Perhaps the most curious misstatement of the talented apologist for fallen majesty is the following: "That falsehood which has been most persistently urged against her is that she declared that her enemies merited beheadal. She never said it, or anything like it. The agent who had called upon the other government, but granting her no such courtesy, had summoned her into his presence, had a stenographer concealed behind a screen, and the stenographer, by a slight and careless movement, exaggerated the signs which signify 'punishment' into the signs which signify 'beheadal.'"

That "agent" was the United States min-ister, Albert S. Willis, who had come with an order from President Cleveland to restore to those who had dethroned her. Mr. Wills is the sole witness to the language which she used, and will doubtless be accepted as reliable. Under date of November 16, 1888, Mr. Willis reported to Secretary W. Q. Gresham as follows:

"Sir: In the forenoon of Monday, the 13th instant, by prearrangement, the queen, accompanied by the royal chamberlain, Mr. Robertson, called at the legation. No one was present at the half-hour interview which followed, her chamberlain having been taken to another room, and Consul General Mills, who had invited her to come, remaining in the front of the house to prevent interruption."

It thus appears, contrary to Mrs. Spofford's allegation, that no third person was present or within hearing. Mr. Willis had no clerk or secretary. Mr. Mills, who had been Col. Blount's stenographer, was on the veranda, a public place, out of hearing the veranda, a public place, out of hearing of anything passing within.

Farther on, Mr. Willis writes that, in answer to his question if she would promise amnesty: "She hesitated a moment and then slowly and calmly answered, There are certain laws of my government by then slowly and calmly answered, "There are certain laws of my government by which I shall abide. My decision would be, as the law directs, that such persons should be beheaded, and their property confiscated to the government." I then said, repeating very distinctly her words, "It is your feeling that these people should be beheaded and their property confiscated?" She replied, "It is." I then said to her: 'Do you fully understand the meaning of every word which I have said to you, and of every word which you have said to me, and, if so, do you still have the same opinion?" Her answer was: 'I have understood and mean all I have said, but I principal corn states of central valleys corn has made rapid growth, but in the southern states it is suffering for rain, in some sections seriously. Excessive rains in Missouri have retarded cultivation and the crop is still backward in Minnesota. In Texas, while the late crop is suffering from drought, the early planted is matured and a good yield assured.

Cotton is needing rain over the greater part of the cotton belt, more particularly the southern portions. The crop is, however, generally clean and fruiting well. A marked improvement is reported from Oklahoms.

da. In southern Texas bolls are beginning to open.

The bulk of the winter wheat crop is now harvested south of the fortieth parallelabout the latitude of the central portions of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois. Excessive rains have retarded harvesting in Missourt, and caused further damage to grain in shock. Good progress with harvesting has been made in Nebraska and northern Indiana, and harvesting will soon be in in Michigan. The crop is maturing on the north Pacific coast, and in California, where harvesting is progressing rapidly, the grain is shrunken less than was anticipated.

Spring wheat has continued to make progress, and is now heading well ever the southern portion of the spring wheat they bring answers. region. In Oregon the best crop for years Rettrement of Commodore Phythian.

region. In Oregon the best crop for Joseph is promised.

Tobacco has continued to improve generally, but is still in poor condition in Kentucky. A marked improvement is reported from Ohlo, and the crop is doing well in Missouri, Pennsylvania and Maryland. Transplanting has been completed in New England and New York, and cutting is in progress in the Carolinas.
